Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. These guidelines are important to help keep fisheries sustainable. Essential aquatic habitat benefits not only important fish species, but a multitude of aquatic organisms (many the fish depend upon to complete their life cycle).

Please act to keep guidelines protecting our oceans strong.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Sound scientific studies have proven that with protection of fish habitat , regions surrounding protected areas have increased fish production and have healthier population structures. If we want to maintain the health of our oceans for the fishing industry , the public and not least of all the organisms that live there, we have got to get on the ball before it is way too late. An integrated approach to ocean protections MUST include strong protections of habitat and spawning zones. Weakening the current habitat guidelines is a sure step in the wrong direction.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As you know, our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and poor management have all led to this alarming decline in the health of our oceans. Therefore, I implore you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Human (or perhaps inhuman) domination of this planet has succeeded in wrecking the natural environment in countless ways. Big business interests ignore the impact of their actions on the environment in pursuit of the almighty dollar. So it's up to the government, and the citizenry, to protect all natural areas. Any guidelines protecting natural habitat, including oceans and fish habitats, should be strengthened, rather than weakened. Please hear my plea.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I am a Ph.D. student at the University of Kentucky. My focus of research is in freshwater pollution and its effects on crayfish, so ocean fisheries are not exactly my specialty. However, the current situation whereby many ocean fishing practices are now able to harvest substantially fewer fish than the previously were able to do is very alarming. Any decent fisherman can tell you that if a lake where you can reliably reel in a nice stringer of fish eventually only gives you a few small bluegill at a time, then something must have happened to the fish in the lake. From what I've read of the situation, we seem to be at that point. I feel that since we don't know the full scope of the problem and the potential ramifications, we should act now to protect what we have left. Please act to protect essential fish habitats and do not weaken currently in place regulative protections.

Sincerest thanks,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

With more and more humans on this planet who are depending on the oceans for their lives food, it is most important that we curb the special interests power. People need to curb their reproduction (as they are the rational {?} beings who according to one philosophy has 'dominion' over the animals and also free will). So you being one of those humans in a power position needs to look at the whole picture and not just cater to the desires of the power mongers; unless, of course, you are intent on bringing and end to a healthy quality life on this planet.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. There is a need to have tighter regulations on fishing in our oceans and stricter penalties for over fishing and killing of protected species. We are fishing more than the fish are producing and the end result will be extinction of many species in the ocean. We also need regulate the pollution of our oceans from boats and the exhaust that they produce. Fishermen also use to be able to go out and catch an amount worthy enough to go home on in a week but now it takes about a month or more to get anything worthwhile to bring back. This is definitely a telltale sign of a decline in ocean life.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Inasmuch as most of the fish now marketed contain sufficient pollutants to cause alerts to avoid regular consumption, it is vital that we do everything we can to promote large areas of unpolluted fish habitat.

If anything, regulations should be strengthened to provide more unpolluted fish habitat so as to promote increased fish populations in anticipation of the growing world dependence on fisheries.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Our oceans are in peril and need enhanced protections and reduced fish catch to help them recover. Please do not weaken the Magnuson-Stevens Act. I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Time and action are critical to stop the rapid decline of our oceans and restore many of the species that are being destroyed.

Please include my opposition to weakening protections in the official record.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Overfishing is causing a serious problem to our oceans, and I'm sure you're aware that the depleted fish population has the potential to become a huge crisis. Protecting fish habitat is an important part of replenishing our ocean's fish, and that will be good for everyone involved, especially fisherman.

I have watched the rivers in the area around the southeast US become polluted and many are so bad that they are no longer useable for recreation purposes.

I have also travelled to Panama 5-6 times in the past ten years and I am well aware what happens to oceans when pollution and waste dumping goes unchecked.

Please don't let this happen to our oceans and coastlines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Unless we are careful about not polluting our oceans, not over fishing, and making certain that endangered species in the ocean have a chance to make a comeback, we are going to be in big trouble in a few years. In fact, we are in trouble now. Have you seen the list of fish which have toxins in them? I have seen plastic and trash floating in the ocean as I have traveled on ships.

Our planet is in desperate need of good stewardship. We need to think carefully about what we are doing, or we are doomed.

How could anyone think of lessening protection for anything? Why would more pollution be a good thing? Why would more human use of an area protected be good in the long run? Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The Bush administration has weakened many other environmental regulations, which will slowly but certainly have long term effects on us all; it would be some consolation if this administration's environmentally destructive plans could be hindered with respect to oceans. Though the oceans make up most of Earth's surface area, they are sensitive to many destructive human practices. The Bush administration has been criticized by many scientists for its disregard of science; please do what you can to fight against unsound science and special interests.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Our oceans are the last vast and great places on our planet that are still largely unexplored, are home to an incredible variety of lifeforms, and are intimately influential on weather systems and carbon dioxide uptake. It just makes sense to sustain that which sustains us, and the oceans play roles in that sustenance we yet don't fully understand. Still we know enough to know that the health of the oceans and our planet is intimately bound to our own. Let's be conservative about exploiting them any more than we already do and be more liberal about protecting them.

I am a former commercial fisherman. I had my boat harbored in Astoria Oregon. I fished for salmon. I went broke as the salmon had been overfished and unprotected.

I loved that life out on the water - I wish protections had been in place long ago - don't let business take away those protections - Restore our Salmon population.

Commercial fishermen are an independent breed of people - their strength isn't in organizing - that's what the government and its enabling and enforcing agencies are supposed to do for us.

Please take care of our fisheries.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The problems of overfishing, habitat destruction and poor ecological management have not gone away, so why should these guidelines? Why, instead, should these not be strengthened, so that it would be harder to ignore them? It would seem the practical thing to do.

I enjoy seafood, but I have to be careful if I don't want to cause more harm than good by my seafood choices. I buy fish from sustainable fisheries only; I do not buy from fish farms. Unless I know that the seafood comes from the wild and is harvested in a sustainable way and with consideration to non-target organisms, I do not eat it. I have made this sacrifice to ensure that the fish I love to eat will survive long after I am gone. I think of the future of all life.

Most people do not do this. They do not care where their food comes from as long as it's on their plate in a timely manner. They are fools. Already in the Mediterranean, fish have become so scarce that their prices have soared. This is because of overfishing, and disregarding habitat. Poor management. And this is not an isolated incident. If things keep on the way they are, soon there will be no seafood for anyone. Don't make the mistakes of the public, sir. They don't appear to know what's good for them.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

When we hear about species after species being in decline, and reductions in size of individuals due to size selection by netting practices, now is the time to drastically improve protection for fish habitats, and oceans generally. While I understand the immediate economic and political pressure to allow less restricted fishing and development, this results in long-term damage to the productivity of the ocean. Please protect our oceans by not weakening current essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they have in the past. Many species are facing total extinction due to the misuse of earth's water resources.

Along with encroachment on the sanctity of marine populations habitat by sports fishing, recreation, and weapons testing, overfishing, habitat destruction, and poor management have all led to this alarming decline in the health of our oceans.

Humankind is dependent on the oceans, rivers and lakes of our planet for the very air we need to breath. Usurping the habitat of even one species disrupts the entire eco-system, and ultimately the quality of all life on earth.

Incredibly, special interests are working to convince the Bush administration to weaken existing ocean protections.

It is inconcievable that these special interests are so entrapped in their greed and need for power that they can not forsee the ultimate destruction of life on our planet by the continued pollution of our water sources.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I am very concerned about the poor state of our oceans, so I hope you'll take the opportunity to protect them. Please carefully review this draft and suggest that the Ocean Commission's final report to the President and Congress includes strong measures to protect our oceans.

Specifically, I encourage you to suggest these prescriptions for better ocean health:

- Protect fragile ocean habitats through the use of protected areas and other tools;
- Transform failing fisheries into sustainable ones to guarantee safe and abundant seafood;
- Reduce dead zones by curbing polluted runoff that creates lack of oxygen and kills marine life;
- Enforce conservation laws to protect ocean wildlife and essential ecosystems;
- Protect our shores from oil by maintaining a moratorium on offshore oil and gas drilling;
- Explore ocean ecosystems by doubling federal investment in ocean science, exploration and education over the next 5 years;
- Reform ocean management by coordinating the hodgepodge of laws and agencies responsible for ocean protection;
- Enact adequate safeguards on aquaculture sites to protect marine ecosystems.

If you have already taken action on behalf of the oceans and/or commented before the draft review came out, thank you!

I am deeply invested in the well-being of our oceans. A healthy marine environment is important to our economy, and gives my family, my friends and me a place to relax and have fun. Please help ensure the Ocean Commission's report protects our country by including the strongest possible protections for our nation's oceans and marine life.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I'm not sure what is going on in Washington over the last three years, but every day I read about regulations that were put in place to protect the people and environment being weakened by Mr. Bush and his corporate interests. This needs to stop because as far as I know, we only have one planet to live on and none of this is doing any of us any good, regardless of whether we are wealthy Americans or the poor from third world countries.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Specifically, I encourage you to implement these prescriptions for better ocean health:

- Protect fragile ocean habitats through the use of protected areas and other tools;
- Transform failing fisheries into sustainable ones to guarantee safe and abundant seafood;
- Reduce dead zones by curbing polluted runoff that creates lack of oxygen and kills marine life;
- Enforce conservation laws to protect ocean wildlife and essential ecosystems;
- Protect our shores from oil by maintaining a moratorium on offshore oil and gas drilling;
- Explore ocean ecosystems by doubling federal investment in ocean science, exploration and education over the next 5 years;
- Reform ocean management by coordinating the hodgepodge of laws and agencies responsible for ocean protection;
- Enact adequate safeguards on aquaculture sites to protect marine ecosystems.

Thank you for taking public opinion into consideration on this issue, as it is important to this generation and many to come.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

It has become abundantly clear that the Bush Administration is fully beholden to large corporate interests, and he is willing to give paybacks to his corporate supporters at the expense of all else, including the American people and the environment that is so important to our health and well-being. For this reason, I believe the Administration will easily cave to the special interests who are asking for a weakening of existing ocean protections. If anything, ocean protections should be strengthened, not weakened. Therefore, I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Our oceans need all the more protection because it is so much harder to see the damage before it has become catastrophic. Contrary to perception, we cannot do limitless damage to them without consequence and we are beginning to see and understand the sometimes irreversible consequences now. This is important; to me and to the planet.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The ocean environment is not an unlimited resource, and without protection, it will be seriously damaged.

I live in Louisiana, the amount of garbage that floats in to our beaches is astounding. Unfortunately, that is just the tip of the iceberg because what is NOT seen has greater impact on ocean life: more trash and dangerous pollutants.

I saw a similar situation in the Hawaiian Islands (more trash then you can imagine--affecting breeding seabirds such as albatrosses)--but there, you are surrounded by sparkling clear blue water and you would not think the situation was similar to Louisiana's muddy shores. But it is. The crisis is worldwide and epidemic. Please help protect our ocean environments and the life it supports. Thank you.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and poor management have all led to this alarming decline in the health of our oceans.

Incredibly, special interests are working to convince the Bush administration to weaken existing ocean protections. I ask you to stand up to this alarming trend, and protect the oceans for the sake of your children and mine.

After all, what are the things that really matter in life?

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

There is no justifiable reason whatsoever weaken ocean protections, from the littoral zones to the high, deep seas, all require if anything more stringent guidelines, in takings, and in the very care of the seas themselves.

This encompasses everything from not overfishing depleted species and employing the foresight necessary, and marine biologists can determine what undermines the realm of the fishes, the corals and the marine mammals, for starters. Really it all starts with tiny animals on which these others rely. That is why the health of the oceans, in terms of the very nature of the waters is so important.

Whatever it is that would interfere with the level of dissolved oxygen or the amount of light coming in, what substances or items do not belong in the oceans in the first place, wasteful and or disgraceful fishing practices, these are all things to consider, and to legislate against.

I thank you.

Sincerely,

Yolanda Garcia

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Protecting this habitat is essential to human health and survival. Already fish have become so poisoned due to pollution, that expectant mothers are dissuaded from eating fish due to high levels of mercury. Only fish contain high levels of Essential Fatty Acids necessary for brain development in children and for health in adults. Please, remember, if we poison our oceans, we poison ourselves.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I have just learned that the National Marine Fisheries Service is considering changes to the existing essential fish habitat guidelines in the Magnuson-Stevens Act. Please do all in your power as Director of the Office of Habitat Conservation to maintain current levels of protection of our oceans and, if anything, to strengthen and expand those protections. We literally depend on the health of our oceans for the health of the planet as a whole and the quality of our lives, so please do not allow the good foundation that has already been laid in our legislation to be undermined by short-term goals.

Thank you in advance for your leadership in this area.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

We can no longer postpone the steps required to stop harming our environment. We can no longer wait for foolproof evidence of how pollutants affect us. Since the beginning of time the rules of cause and effect apply. They will not stop no matter how much we wish it. It is always less costly to prevent than to repair damage. We can no longer afford to be irresponsible.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

The oceans are vital to human interests. Already they are weakened. Large schools of fish have diminished and the whale population is down. Ocean water is dirty because we have indiscriminately dumped our waste into them making habitats disappear. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Unless we preserve critical nursery habitat many species of fish will likely disappear. It is not just those fish species that seemingly are only important to ichthyologists but many of the commercial species that feed the world. Once these estuarine areas are compromised, the species that utilized them have no place to spawn and no refugia for juvenile fish to grow and mature into the resource we have become so dependent upon.

As a citizen I try to avoid varieties of seafood which have been overfished and still arrive in markets and restaurants everywhere daily. However, I know this does very little in the scheme of overfishing and habitat destruction. I hope you will consider measures to protect the ocean habitat and do what you can to curb the overfishing.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The health of our oceans is critical to our survival as a species and to all of life on this planet. We have already done untold damage to our waters and to marine life through oil spills and other toxic waste. We have overfished the oceans at the expense of the balance of ocean life, seen in the steady decline of the coral reefs. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and poor management have all led to this alarming decline in the health of our oceans.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Indeed, the guidelines should be strengthened, and existing laws should be enforced more strictly.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Much of our wilderness has been compromised by modernization-please let us leave the oceans and marine life alone-we live on a lake and can look out from our back door and see ducks, cranes, and geese in abundance-we also have a variety of fish that the men fish and then put back in the lake-there are no electric motors allowed, no swimming, and it is really peaceful for all the residents. I'd like to feel that the same could and should be done for all our waters as the earth is what percentage water?

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Our ocean's are a beautiful different world here on our own planet. Nobody really knows how fragile they are. They provide food and employment but used for excessive corporate exploitation to enrich the pockets of a few with meaningless points or pieces of paper that represent some abstract value they will neither inspire, relax or feed millions of people.

The oceans and waterways belong to all humans to take care of.

Be reasonable and intelligent and think long term survival - not just greed, power and profits.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Because of past oceanic degradation the U.S. had to extend its fishing rights from the internationally accepted twelve miles to two hundred. And still industries couldn't take enough to satisfy themselves. With more pollution, over fishing, destruction of the habitats on the continental shelf than ever before, we're slowing nailing shut the coffin of our own nation and crippling the rest of the world as we go. I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. It'll cost our future if we get on the wrong side of these issues.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I have become thoroughly disgusted with the bush administration's utter ignorance and neglect of the cries of the public and the earth and feel that our only recourse to more readily administer relief and assistance to the world, as a whole, is to not re-elect any of them.

My heart is with the environment, as it always has been, and the bush administration has proven to the world to just be another group of Republican buffoons, deserving no consideration whatsoever.

Sincerely,
Timothy Harris

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Ocean habitats, which include coral, sea grasses, sandy bottoms and rocks, all provide fish with the food, shelter, spawning areas and nursing grounds that are essential to their continued survival. The various habitats that are essential to fish survival are collectively called essential fish habitat.

Currently, under the Magnuson-Stevens Act, essential fish habitat is protected under federal law. However, the National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS), the agency in charge of federal fisheries, is currently considering making changes to the existing protections.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. I used to do some SCUBA diving, so I've done some up-close observation of marine habitats. This was many years ago, and then as now, there was degradation of marine environments. Please do not weaken fish habitat guidelines or any other marine protection efforts.
